

Eagle Conferencing Offers Free Conferencing Services Immediately to Businesses in Lieu of the Recent Bombings

Eagle Conferencing offers key communication help to Victims and Families

Bangalore, INDIA: July 28, 2008 — Eagle Conferencing, India and Eagle Teleconferencing, USA announced today that they are offering free conferencing services to businesses, victims, families, and organizations involved in recovery operations. The free service will be available until August 31st 2008.

Since initiating its flagship and award winning conference call services in India as of August 2007, Eagle Conferencing has experienced from previous disaster recovery efforts that immediate communication is vital and imperative to reach out victims, families, and businesses that are affected. "We are very concerned about this unfortunate incidence of bombings and its corresponding effects in society at large in Ahmedabad and Bangalore. It clearly demonstrates need for the business community to reach out to our society," says Kent Charugundla, founder and CEO of Eagle Conferencing. "Our free conferencing services will be available to all qualified businesses and families 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Callers may stay on conference for as long as they wish to talk with others or utilize the services to coordinate recovery operations. We have global annual capacity of over ten billion minutes and we can accommodate large volume of traffic on our global intelligent bridge network at any time."

Eagle Conferencing's goal is to continue as a solid corporate citizen with highly reliable service provider, and excellence in quality. In support of that aim, Eagle Conferencing in India is offering a free service to all qualified businesses and families regardless of how many minutes they use. Any one interested in our service can call our office at 080-6576-6600 to speak to a representative or visit our website www.eagleconferencing.in to register for this offer.
